In 2015, Shanghai International Studies University (SISU) continued its commitment to promoting well-rounded education, serving national strategy, giving back to the community, and bridging China and the world. Through its two strategies: Multilingual+ and Internet+, SISU has made great breakthroughs in many aspects, such as student development, development of academic disciplines, academic research, faculty development, international partnerships, campus culture, giving back to the community, and university governance.

In 2015, we launched the Outstanding Talent Cultivation program focusing on outstanding students with special academic strengths and innovative potential. We actively planned and promoted educational reforms, implementing the Multilingual+ strategy to attract international talent, and building the Base for Rare Language Professionals. We are also proud that SISU graduates remain more employable than their peers from other Chinese universities.

In 2015, we accelerated our disciplinary development. SISU's foreign language and literature studies were added to the Shanghai Peak Discipline Program for Higher Education Institutions (Class I). Aiming to build world-class disciplines, we have continued our commitment to strengthening and diversifying our disciplines.

By leveraging our unique strengths, pooling our resources, and pursuing a clear roadmap, SISU carried out a whole range of academic research projects at the national or provincial/ministerial levels. We have made concerted efforts to make collaborative innovations on regional and state studies.

We have made new breakthroughs in faculty development. A number of SISU's faculty members have been enlisted by national and provincial/ministerial academic leader programs.

We have continued to go global and promote communication between Chinese and overseas students. We have been acceded to the Confucius China Studies Program (CCSP); we have joined FutureLearn to offer massively open online courses on Cross-cultural Communication; our courses are now available. We have also launched the China Studies program for overseas postgraduates.

We have invested much energy in cultivating both national awareness and a global vision among our students. We have vigorously promoted education in traditional Chinese culture and on the other hand brought in advanced ideas from abroad to create a diverse and inclusive campus culture. We have seen the overseas influence and attention of the community generated by our multi-language website and we've also steadily promoted entrepreneurship among our students.

We've remained committed to delivering opinion and knowledge support for national strategies as a think tank. The Middle East Studies Institute has been enlisted as a University Think Tank of Shanghai (UTTS), and the Research Center for Foreign Language Strategies has become one of the first member units of the National Language Think Tank.

In the past year, SISU enacted the Articles of Association of Shanghai International Studies University (2015-2020) and the Charter of the Academic Council, modernizing its governance, resulting in the election of a new academic committee. We have also established the Public Service Center to enhance campus administration.

We would like to extend our sincerest thanks to government authorities, our alumni from China and overseas, our faculty, staff, and students, and the whole community for their generous support and help. This yearbook will be published when SISU celebrates its 66th anniversary. The number “6” has an auspicious meaning in traditional Chinese culture. Following the motto of “Integrity, Vision and Academic Excellence”, aiming to “Interpret the World and Translate the Future”, and undertaking the mission of leading and driving the reform and development of foreign language education in China, SISU will significantly enhance our strengths to become a base for the training of high-end international professionals, a multi-disciplinary knowledge and innovation platform featuring foreign language education, a think tank for national economic and social development, and a bridge of communication between China and the outside world. In the future, we will make the best use of our government support and seize every opportunity to build up a first-class university and leading disciplines, and pool the wisdom and efforts of our faculty, staff and students and the general community to write a new chapter in the development of SISU.

*Understanding the World, Promoting China
A New Stage in the Development of Political Studies in SISU*

刘中民 中东研究所

Liu Zhongmin
Middle East Studies Institute

上海外国语大学的政治学学科是从外国语言文学学科中孵化成长起来的新兴学科。从诞生之日起，上外政治学学科就具有以区域国别研究见长、国际化优势突出的鲜明特点。经过三十余载三代学人筚路蓝缕的耕耘，政治学学科已经发展成为人才培养体系完备、科研特色优势明显、资政建言能力突出的一级学科，上外也是迄今为止全国外语高校中惟一拥有政治学一级学科博士点的高校。

当前，国际社会和中国均在发生前所未有的深刻变化，中国的国际角色也正在发生从国际体系参与者到建设者、引领者的深刻转型。在中国全面推进国家治理能力现代化、深入落实“四个全面”，着力推进“一带一路”战略的历史变革中，包括政治学在内的社会科学的重要使命在于正确认知中国与世界，并架起中国与世界沟通的桥梁。由此看来，以强化区域国别研究增强认识世界的能力，以开拓中国学学科增强向世界阐释中国的能力，也恰是2015年上外政治学学科转型发展最大的亮点。

优势明显、特色鲜明的区域国别研究学科群日渐成形，是

上外政治学学科建设取得的重要成就。在2015年，中东研究所已正式进入上海市高校智库建设行列，并在资政建言、引领舆论方面发挥了重要作用。此外，上外还在2015年增设了中日韩合作研究中心等一系列区域国别研究中心。目前，上外已经形成以教育部人文社会科学重点研究基地、上海市高校智库中东研究所为龙头，以教育部区域国别研究基地英国研究中心、俄罗斯研究中心、欧盟研究中心为骨干，以其他一系列校级区域国别研究中心为支撑的学科群，这无疑为开展“一带一路”沿线国家研究奠定了坚实的学科基础。但是，也要清醒地看到，在实现政治学与外语深度交叉融合，并最终建立具有上外特色的“外国学”学科群方面，上外学人依然任重而道远。

中国学研究与人才培养体系初步形成，代表着上外政治学的新兴方向。长期以来，国际上中国学研究的重镇均群集欧美，对中国的认知充满了传统东方学的傲慢与偏见。因此，建立中国自身的中国学，向世界推介真实的中国，已成为崛起之中国的当务之急。值此之际，上外克服重重困难，在短时间内建立中国学研究中心，在2015年完成人才培养体系建设无疑

总之，建设中国特色的“外国语”和“中国学”既是新时期外国语大学学科建设的历史使命与发展方向，也是实现外国语言文学与社会科学深度融合的路径所在。我们衷心期待上外的“外国语”和“中国学”成为学科建设的双引擎，并不断创造佳绩，再铸辉煌。

Political studies at Shanghai International Studies University (SISU) were born out of language and literature studies. They have a unique international perspective, as they are based on regional and state studies. Over three decades, the joint efforts of three generations of scholars have transformed our political studies into a complete system with special strengths for education and research. SISU's political studies have become a discipline with strong influence and we have been able to offer valuable advice on government administration and international relations. At present, SISU is the only higher education institution for foreign languages to offer Ph. D. degree in politics.

Now China and the world alike are undergoing unprecedented changes, and the role of China in the international community is turning from a participant to a builder and even a leader. China is modernizing its state governance, moving steadily toward the goals of comprehensively building a moderately prosperous society, deepening reform, advancing law-based governance, and strictly governing the Party, and making strategic efforts to make the Belt and Road initiative a reality. In this historical context, social sciences, most notably political studies, are obliged to promote mutual understanding between China and the outside world. This makes it imperative to further enhance regional and state studies to better understand the world and promote China studies to better explain China to the rest of the world. This is the key task, and the highlight, in the development of political studies in SISU in 2015.

SISU has steadily formed a system of regional and state studies with prominent strengths and characteristics, which is the key achievement in the development of political studies in SISU.

In 2015, the Middle East Studies Institute officially became a University Think Tank of Shanghai (UTTS), and has remained very active in advising the government and shaping public opinion. In the same year, SISU also established a number of new centers for regional and state studies, including the Center for Trilateral Cooperation Studies to further cooperation between Chinese, South Korean and Japanese universities. Up to now, SISU has established a strong disciplinary system consisting of the National Institute of Humanities and Social Science Studies (Middle East Studies Institute) and the National Institute of Regional and State Studies (Center for British Studies, Center for Russian Studies and Center for European Union Studies) which are sponsored by the Ministry of Education, as well as a number of university-level regional and state studies centers. This system of institutes and centers has laid a strong foundation for our studies of the countries and regions along the geographical scope covered by the Belt and Road Initiative. Of course, we are keenly aware that there is still a long way to go before we can integrate political studies with foreign language studies and achieve the ultimate goal of building a complete system of foreign studies with our own characteristics.

The formation of a system of China Studies for both research and education marks the new direction of political studies in SISU. For a long time, Western institutions have led China studies, and the understanding of China has been based on traditional Orientalism which is Eurocentric and biased. There is a strong need to develop China studies in China in order to promote the true image of China to the whole world. Taking the task as our own, SISU has founded the Center for China Studies. This is no simple task, but we believe it is the right and worthwhile strategic decision.

In short, the development of both foreign studies and China studies with distinct Chinese characteristics is a historical mission and new development direction of SISU. It is also the key to integrating foreign language studies and social sciences. We sincerely hope that SISU's foreign studies and China Studies will become twin engines driving SISU to proceed from good to great.

在中国上外当教师 Teaching in China, teaching at SISU

耶鲁安 英语学院

Jeroen van de Weijer
School of English Studies

教学是一项基本工作，不管在世界上什么地方，教学工作可能都是差不多的。教学工作涉及两个主体，一个是教师，职责是传授社会认为有益的知识或者技能，另一个主体是学生，学生的主要任务是掌握知识和技能，或者让人家认定他们已经掌握。也就是说，教学工作就是知识的传输和接受过程。关于知识传授的最佳途径，已有无数的论述，但是，“传授”其实是个不当的用词，好教师不会只将储存在自己大脑中的信息或数据传输到学生的大脑里，这种工作电脑也能干。目前，电脑还干不了这个工作，或者说还干不好。这并非说明信息技术在课堂里排不上用场，相反，现代信息技术应用对课堂教学的用处非常大。例如，Blackboard 和 Moodle 等教育平台在外得到很好的运用，通过这样的平台，词汇练习和简单的阅读理解练习等变成了电脑“游戏”，同时，电脑还可以检查学生输入的答案是否正确。这样就能为教师节省时间，更重要的是，可以提高学生的学习乐趣，毕竟学生日渐习惯于利用电子设备或者在网络上学习或者做其他事情。

慕课 (MOOC) 就是一个很好的应用，最近也变得炙手

可热。诚然，慕课对社会有巨大的潜在贡献，例如可以帮助教育设施不足的地区但可以接入因特网的居民接受更好的教育。慕课最大的优点就是其优越的扩展性，单位使用成本极低。但是，慕课一定会很成功吗？目前的现实情况是，尽管有些慕课有几千名注册学生，但只有小部分真正积极参与，完成课程或通过测试的比例甚至更小，线下课程则不可能出现这样的情况。另一个情况是，至少在目前，慕课并没有真正惠及贫困或者受教育条件不好的人群，从而帮助他们获得必要的知识和技能，改善他们未来的生活状况。慕课的未来还取决于是否能妥善解决作弊（例如学生身份造假）和网络课程认证等问题。

因此，传统的线下课程形式似乎还有存在的价值，至少目前还有价值。线下课程形式已经存续了几千年之久，原因是这种课程形式本质上是快乐的。围绕老师有浓厚兴趣的话题，师生展开互动，那是极好的事情，而如果学生因此获得了知识或者加深了理解，或者激发了同样的兴趣，那就更妙了。在这种情况下，教学就算达到应有的目标。

那么，在中国当教师和其他地方有差别吗？当然有，不管

到哪里，了解当地文化和习俗都是极其重要的，不仅要了解和尊重本地的文化和习俗，还必须加以珍惜。跨文化交际本就是一个难题，是一个重要的研究领域。在跨文化语境下进行教学的困难自然更大。就我个人的经验而言，中国的英语课程班级通常比较大，比我从前教过的班级都更大，一个本科班级可能有几百个学生，硕士研究生班级也有四五十个人。因为班级实在很大，课堂讨论的机会十分有限。老师问学生有没有问题，通常没有有人说有问题。这种反应与文化有关，学生可能不希望让人家觉得自己不懂，也有可能是他们觉得如果提出问题会让老师难堪，怕问倒老师。有时候，这种情况会让老师觉得学生没有好好复习，不过，这种感觉是完全错误的，因为我在上外期间，每一次下课后，学生都会排队问我问题，包括让我重新解释课本里的某个小点，而我也会发现，他们的课本上密密麻麻地写了许多笔记，也有人会指出老师上课时说的话存在矛盾。也就是说，学生通常在课后提问，上课时不提问的，因此，教师应该事先安排好时间，鼓励学生课后提问。中国学生的课后表现表明，尽管他们很尊重老师，但他们还是敢于质疑甚至挑战教师的学识或者常识。就此而言，中国的课堂十分重视学术交流和自由，课堂气氛十分愉快，十分开放。最后一点，学生会在课后寻找一切可能的机会和途径问问题或者获取信息。例如，他们都会建立微信群或者QQ群，一起讨论如何通过考试，一起猜期中考会考什么。他们极其善于寻找课外电子资源，包括新的例子，甚至可以找到完整的电子书，然后逐点深入研究讨论。所以，在中国教书，绝对不能忽视网络，教师应该根据自己的兴趣，在可能的情况下鼓励学生参与网络互动，也许在课堂上运用Moodle平台是很好的方式。

总而言之，上外的课堂有慕课的基本特征：班级很大，学生热情很高，很聪明，课堂气氛很好，很开放，很愉快，在教学中网络运用很频繁，学生会通过当前社会流行的途径寻找资源，教师如果能积极参与这种互动，就可以取得很好的教学效果。所以说，教学活动是双向的，是两个主体的结合。

Teaching is of course a fundamental activity, and one might think that teaching would be more or less the same across the globe. Two parties are usually involved. On the one side of the classroom, there is the teacher, who has (or is thought to have) some knowledge or some skills whose acquisition is judged (by society) to be generally beneficial to the advancement of society. On the other side, there are the students, who aim to acquire such knowledge or package of skills, or aim to be seen to acquire them. The process of transfer, or acquisition, of this desirable knowledge is what teaching is all about. Endless tomes have been written about the best ways to go about this process; in general, “transfer” is a very unfortunate misnomer, because good teaching is certainly not a simple “transfer” of some facts or data from the teacher’s mind to the students’ minds. If that were the case, computers could do it – and it is, at least at the present time, quite clear that computers cannot do it, or cannot do it well. This is not to say that information technology has no place in the classroom – on the contrary: modern applications are extremely useful as aids in the classroom. Examples are electronic supplements to a course (such as Blackboard or Moodle, also used at SISU), exercises that have been “gamified” in computer applications (for instance to learn or practice foreign language vocabulary) and simple reading comprehension exercises, where a computer can check if the answers a student has typed in are correct. This saves time for the teacher, and, more importantly, can add a level of enjoyment for students, who are increasingly used to doing things electronically and/or online.

In this context it is also interesting to discuss the success of MOOCs (massive online open courses [or classes]), which have recently become extremely popular. Of course, MOOCs have huge potential for society, for instance by being able to reach communities whose inhabitants have no easy access to education (but who do have internet access). MOOCs are eminently scalable, which means that their cost per user can be extremely low. Are they also successful? It turns out that although in some cases thousands of students sign up for a MOOC, usually only a small percentage actually participate actively in the course and even fewer finish or pass the course – not a result one would accept in an “offline” course. It also turns out that, at the moment at least, MOOCs do not usually reach the poor or underprivileged for which they might, perhaps in the future, be a gateway to higher knowledge and usable skills. The future success of MOOCs also depends on whether problems such as cheating (e.g. with respect to identification of students) and proper accreditation of online courses can be solved.

Thus, the traditional offline class format seems, at least for the time being, here to stay. One of the reasons why this format has stuck around for thousands of years must be the enjoyment inherent to this set-up: it is simply wonderful to interact with students on a topic that a teacher has a passionate interest in. It is extremely satisfying to be able to see that some knowledge, some understanding, and perhaps, sometimes, even a spark of that same passionate interest has taken root in the mind of students. When this happens, teaching is recognized for the privilege that it is.

Is teaching in China different from teaching at other places? Of course, it is vitally important to take into account local culture and local customs wherever one goes – not only to be aware of it and respect it, but in fact to cherish it. Cross-cultural communication has its specific problems, which are studied in a whole, important research field of its own. Cross-cultural teaching compounds these problems and presents its own additional challenges. In my experience, classes in China are usually larger than what I was used to in other English courses; BA classes may involve hundreds of students at the same time, but even at the MA level, classes of 40 or 50 are no exception, making them quite massive. Perhaps as a result of this size, discussion in class is limited. If a teacher asks if there are any questions, there usually are no questions. It is also possible that this attitude is a more deeply ingrained cultural trait; the students would not like to sound misinformed about a particular topic, or, even worse, with their question suggest or indicate that the teacher might be misinformed. Sometimes this leads to the impression that students have not reviewed their course material. This impression would be completely misplaced, however, as is proven after each and every session of every course I have ever taught at SISU: after homework has been assigned and the class has officially ended, students line up to ask for further clarification, discuss subtle points of interpretation of their textbook (usually annotated with dense scribbling) or point out not-so-subtle inconsistencies in the teacher’s arguments. Thus, questions come after the class, not during, and it is a good idea to encourage this by allotting time for it in one’s planning. So after class is where Chinese students show that, although ever deferential, they are not afraid to ask or challenge teacher’s or common wisdoms. In this respect, Chinese courses hold academic exchange and freedom in high regard, in an atmosphere that is very pleasant and entirely open. Finally, students will make use of any and all possibilities to ask questions or gain information even after class is over. They will invariably organize themselves in WeChat or QQ groups and discuss the best way to pass the course, or the next midterm exam, there. They are incredibly creative in finding extra electronic resources, new examples, whole e-books and discuss these point by point. Thus, to a very large extent, courses in China also have an online aspect to them that cannot be ignored. Depending on a teacher’s time and interest, a teacher could encourage this and participate, perhaps by introducing a Moodle component to the course, as already mentioned).

To conclude, classes at SISU are MOOCs in their own special way: massive because of the wonderful numbers of enthusiastic and highly intelligent students; open because of their great atmosphere and enjoyment; and online because students will find the resources they need in ways that are consistent with today’s society. Teachers will do well to participate in this interactive process, so that education will go both ways.

外国语言文学学科素来是上外的传统强项，基础厚实，源远流长，上外学人筚路蓝缕，薪火相传，铸造了这块“金字招牌”。今天，如何在新形势下传承、开拓和创新这块“金字招牌”既是上外保持和提升办学优势的核心竞争力，也是上外做大做强教学和科研的根基。

“学科强校”，奠基于外国语言文学学科之上，这是我校立足于国内名校之列和被社会认可的“看家本领”，入选上海市高峰学科（I类）便是明证。但一个现实问题是：语言文学研究作为基础研究、长线研究在急遽转型发展的时代总显得慢了半拍，甚至不合时宜。作为学术中人，可以坦然承受潜心研究的寂寞；而作为社会中人，则时刻感受到国家对外语资源从“单一型”向“复合多元”转型的紧迫，如何使纯粹的学术研究承载社会使命，发挥智库作用，对接国家战略已刻不容缓；在这方面语言研究院（中国外语战略研究中心）是成功的范例，依托我校多语种优势，整合各方资源，拓宽平台，发挥学科群效应。此外，区域与国别研究基地（欧盟研究中心）、中东研究所智库建设之所以在国内颇具特色和影响，除了跨学科

的理念、方法和资源整合外，自然离不开我校外语学科的坚实后盾。因此，与综合院校相比，上外要继续保持外国语言文学在国内的高峰学科地位，以此支撑、带动更多，更具高水平的学科高原涌现，与其他高校形成你有我全（语种全），你有我精（语言精）的错位发展格局。

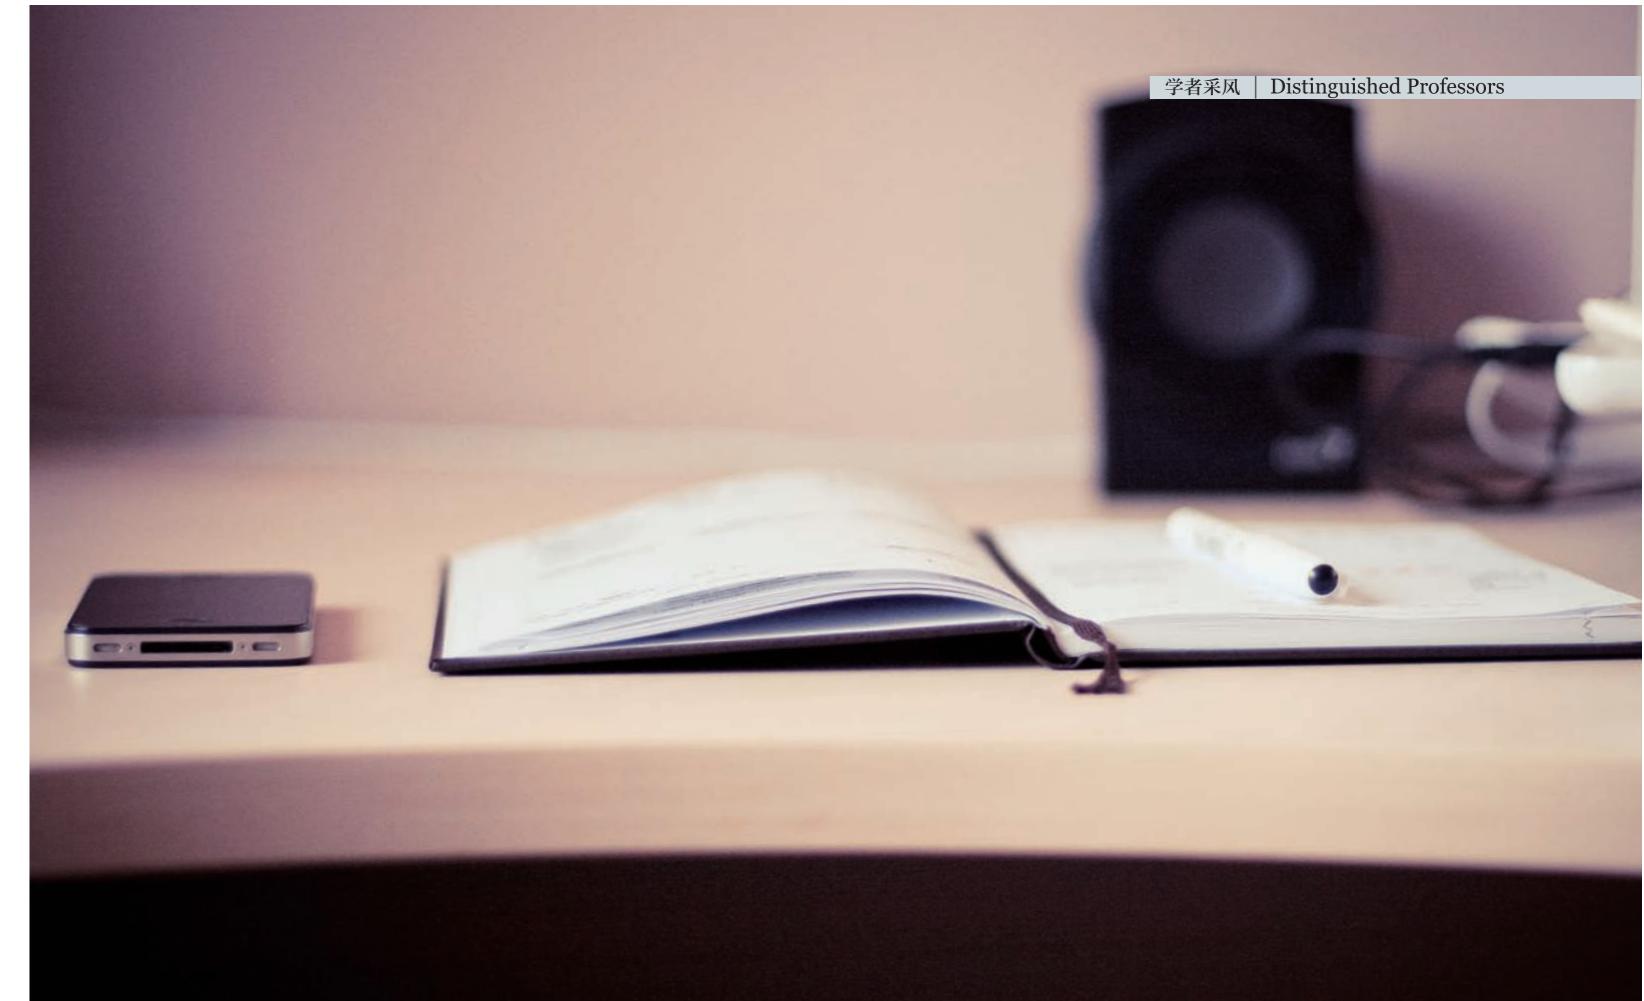

诚然，如此理解和规划外语学科有“工具化”之嫌；不可否认，外语学科是人文学科，归根到底要以人为本，其终极旨归是育人。但不争的事实是，外国语言文学在经历了上世纪改革开放年代的壮丽与辉煌后，显出相对沉稳的滞涨态势。在新形势下，这一学科的前景和格局将会怎样，如何寻找新的学术生长点，推动研究的深入，学科再攀高峰，为学界同仁所关切。我校外国语言文学学科能否通过转型、分化、重组，衍生出更多的学术生长点，乃至细分化的学科点，以此组建特色团队，构建互为支撑的学科群，促进传统的学术研究和学科建设转型升级，以此引领我国外语学科革故鼎新，甚至为国家外语战略规划的制定起到一定影响作用，值得期待，不妨一试。

Foreign language and literature studies are the traditional strengths of Shanghai International Studies University (SISU). They have a long history and earned SISU a good reputation. The key issue is how to continue this tradition and explore new frontiers through innovation. The issue must be addressed while SISU endeavors to further enhance its core competitiveness and leave more legacies to future generations.

The academic development of SISU has been based, to a great extent, on the performance of foreign language and literature studies which has been highly reputed. This is perhaps why SISU has been accorded to the Shanghai Peak Discipline Program for Higher Education Institutions (Class I). There is still a real question, however: as they are basic studies and fit for the long run, foreign language and literature studies may not catch up with the swift changes that define the contemporary world. To some extent, I would rather say they are not fit for the present era. As an academic, I can endure loneliness and submerge myself in long-term basic studies. But I am still part of the real world and can feel the urgency of transforming and diversifying foreign language resources for the country. There is an immediate need for academia to shoulder social responsibilities and serve the government as think tanks. In this regard, SISU's State Language Commission Research Institute, or the Research Center for Foreign Language Strategies, provides a perfect example. Leveraging SISU's unique combination of strengths in language and literature studies, the institute has integrated various resources within SISU and expanded the platform for research to generate cross-disciplinary synergy. Other examples include the National Institute of Regional and State Studies (especially the Center for European Union Studies). Both have made good marks as national think tanks and have gained strong influence because they are very well supported by language and literature studies in SISU, in addition to the innovation of concepts and methods and integration of other resources. That means, unlike comprehensive universities, SISU can and should keep its foreign language and literature studies at the peak level nationwide in order to support and drive the growth of other high-aiming disciplines of SISU. It would also allow SISU to prosper in harmony with other universities.

Of course, I would admit that this approach to foreign language and literature studies is utilitarian. We cannot deny that foreign language and literature studies are humanity studies which ultimately aim at developing people. It is also an apparent fact, however, that foreign language and literature studies have become rather stagnant after the initial surge ensuing national reform and opening up and the boom that lasted decades. Everyone is now concerned about the future of foreign language and literature studies and whether or how they can scale new heights. If foreign language and literature studies are reformed through reshuffling and reorganizing, SISU can perhaps generate new growth points or even create new “academic segments”. It will surely spur new faculty members, help to build mutually supporting discipline clusters, and more desirably promote the upgrading of traditional academic disciplines. I believe such changes to the foreign language and literature studies in SISU are worthwhile because they will renew our outlook and make a difference to the national strategy regarding foreign languages.

Understanding and Communicating with the World via Languages

语言是什么？这个问题古老而又常新。施莱赫尔认为，语言是天然的有机体，语言学是一门关于自然的科学。把语言作为自然科学对象的研究构成了语言研究的一大基本领域。与此同时，语言又是联接人类社会的纽带，是存储和传播人类知识的载体，是人类精神的一个部分，是影响人类认知世界的概念框架，洪堡特甚至认为，语言存在于人的本性，是人类发展的精神力量。从语言的人文性和社会性入手，就可以解读人类文明的基因，洞悉社会与历史发展的奥秘。

我很庆幸自己选择了语言研究与教学作为自己的职业。我的母语——汉语是全世界使用人口最多的语言，蕴含着东方古老文明深邃的内涵；我从小学开始学习的英语是全球最通用的工作语言，能让我读懂近70%的研究文献、了解众多的文明与智慧；我从大学开始学习并教授多年的俄语，不仅有完全不同于汉语的语言学特征，而且是斯拉夫民族文化的典型代表，并被超过3亿人作为母语或第二语言广泛使用。了解和掌握不同的语言，不仅获得了更加便利的交流工具，也让我叹服于人类文明的博大、多样，并得以从他者的角度观察自己的母语和民

西方学者对世界语言的描写与分类研究，开启了认识不同文明的区域研究传统，帮助人们找到通向世界多元文化的大门。今天的中国语言学家面临同样的历史使命，我们不仅需要获得更多的世界语言知识、帮助更多的中国人学习掌握国外的语言，也要更加重视语言所承载的社会文化信息，让语言的研究和教学成为沟通中国与世界、获得共识和认同、建立情感互动的通道，向世界知识体系贡献更多的中国智慧。

What's language? That's an old yet renewing question. According to August Schleicher, a language is an organism while linguistics is a science. The study of languages as organisms has become a basic part of linguistic studies. Meanwhile, language is also a social bond and a medium for storing and transmitting human knowledge and wisdom. It is therefore part of the human spirit and a conceptual framework for human beings to recognize and understand the world. Wilhelm von Humboldt believes that language is rooted in human nature and it offers the spiritual power driving human progress. Linguistic studies from the human and social perspectives are essential for understanding the DNA of human civilization and the secrets of social and historical development.

On my own part, I am lucky to work on linguistic studies and language teaching as my career. Chinese, my mother tongue, is the most spoken language in the world and an epitome of the profound achievements of the Chinese civilization. English, the foreign language I have learned since my primary school years, is now a global language to some extent and has enabled me to read a great proportion of literature for my academic research and understand most civilizations in the world and their wisdom. Russian, which I started to learn in college and have taught for many years, is spoken by over 300 million people as their mother tongue or second language but it is still an exotic language with totally linguistic properties from Chinese while representing the Slavian tradition. The combination of languages I understand and master is a great facilitation for my communication with the external world, and offers me an awesome perspective on the diversity of human civilizations. I am also able to observe my own mother tongue and national culture from the perspective of Others. In short, via languages, I have obtained a much richer experience of life and soul.

Western scholars have initiated the convention of regional investigation into diverse civilizations and opened the door to diverse cultures in the world through descriptions and classified studies of languages. Today, Chinese linguists face a similar historic mission. We must not only learn more about languages in the world or help more Chinese master foreign languages, but also try to understand the social and cultural messages borne by languages and turn languages into channels connecting China with the outside world and bonds of mutual understanding and affinity. We must also bring more Chinese wisdom into the global intellectual system through language teaching and linguistic studies.
